HOW TO DO THE GEORGE!

Even the press doesn't know the difference:

"Sharp impersonations... a dead ringer for President George Bush" - Los Angeles Times

"A remarkable George Bush look-alike" - Connoisseur Magazine

"It looks like the nation's leader: a lean, 6-foot figure with a square jaw and brown hair streaked with gray" - Baltimore Evening Sun

"A ceaselessly ebullient George Bush" - Miami Herald

"John Simmons was convincing and original in his portrayal" - The Review

"The Bush walk and gestures can be vague, but Mr. Simmons has them dangerously down pat" - The Washington Times

"A comically simpering George Bush" - The Washington Post

▲ JOHN SIMMONS, 34, Washington, D.C., comedian and founder of the Gross National Product comedy troupe:
"You got to get that red, white and blue combination worked down—the blue suit, the white shirt, the red, white and blue tie. And make sure the pinstripes aren't too wide." Get a Millie look-alike and a flag to wrap yourself in. Malaprop sporadically: Indicate that you are the environment President by declaring, "We've got to take care of this clubhouse effect."
